Program Description - Dedicated Fixed Monthly Cost Advanced z/OS V1 R8 Remote Development Program (RDP)

For VAA Exhibit No. 227F - Remote Access Option

Program Intent

The Remote Development Program is intended solely for testing solution provider developed software in an z/OS V1 R8 environment. Remote Development Programs (RDPs) allow selected solution developers the opportunity to test their software in a new environment thus supplementing porting, migration or regression test efforts.

Program Implementation

Technical Support.

The IBM Remote Development Program is conducted by the Innovation Center - Dallas (IIC-Dallas) located in Dallas, Texas. The IIC-Dallas provides comprehensive support for this offering worldwide via electronic services.

Developer system programming and operations staff should expect to provide basic skills in the following areas in order to successfully use this program: chosen operating system operations (z/OS), system administration, and debug.

The following program option is available:

Remote Access Option

The product(s) are made available, along with other software, on IBM mainframe processors which are accessible throughout the world. Solution developers use dial-up or leased line connections to access the network and the processors in order to run the provided systems[1].

[1] Developers provide all necessary hardware and software, including IBM Personal Communicators or a compatible SSL TN3270 emulation client, and pay carrier charges to connect their equipment to the Internet Service Provider of their choice.

Participating solution developers are provided with sufficient resources to perform remote testing of developer software[2]. Each developer is furnished with a remote virtual z/OS operating system operating as a second level guest system under z/VM. This provides maximum flexibility for testing new code and allows complete user control of an entire virtual processor, including console operations[3], unrestricted accessibility to object code and all required system authorizations (system key, supervisor state, etc.). Tapes developers wish to install and test in the provided environment may be sent to the IIC-Dallas for tape mount requests and temporary storage during the program.

Program Environment for Remote Access Option

CPU: IBM Processor

OPERATING MODE: z/OS V1 R8 (2nd level guest system under z/VM)

DASD: Approx. 10 Gigabytes of free space for developer's product

TAPE: 3480

Note: If resources in addition to those listed here are required (e.g. additional DASD space or IBM products), the request for those resources should be made in writing, when possible, prior to or in conjunction with the return of the signed Dedicated Fixed Monthly Cost Advanced z/OS V1 R8 RDP agreement stating the reason for the request. This will enable the IIC - Dallas to give full consideration and quicker response as to whether the required configuration can be made available. Added charges may be required for additional resources.

Additional Software

*IMS
*CICS TS
*DB2
```

Note: * These products are available upon request at an additional fee.

---

[2] See "Program Environment for Remote Access Option" of this document for details of the testing environment.

[3] Users accessing this environment are expected to have the necessary operator skills required for console operations; a basic level of documented instruction is provided with the program.

2

Program Security

In order to participate in this program, developers must have a signed IBM Agreement for Exchange of Confidential Information (AECI) and AECI Supplement on file with IBM covering information and materials supplied during the program.

The protection of confidential and proprietary information is of the utmost importance to IBM and the IIC-Dallas. The RDP has been certified by IBM Corporate Headquarters as an Inter-Enterprise System Connection (IESC), which provides extensive security for isolation of solution developers and proprietary software products.

If you have any question on security, please contact IIC-Dallas immediately.

Program Agreement

Program Agreement for Developers in the U.S. or Canada

The IBM Vendor Access Agreement (VAA) describes the terms and conditions for IIC-Dallas test programs. The VAA will be signed once and remains active until either party terminates per the agreement.

An Exhibit to the VAA will be presented for agreement for each product specific test program and program option. The Exhibit will describe the terms and conditions unique and specific to each program/option.

As an end user the developer must agree to the terms and conditions of the IBM Vendor Access Agreement (VAA) and the Exhibit to the VAA.

Program Agreement for Developers outside the U.S. and Canada

Developers outside the U.S. and Canada will utilize the IBM Agreement for Exchange of Confidential Information (AECI) that describes the terms and conditions between the developer and the IIC - Dallas.

A Supplement entitled Early Customer Support Program For Software Vendor Access to IBM Products will also be utilized. This Supplement to the IBM AECI describes the terms and conditions for participation in the IBM IIC-Dallas test program.

Program Charges

Charges for the Remote Access Option are based on a flat fee.
