

Computer Program Patent

New York Times (1857-Current file); Jun 12, 1968; ProQuest Historical Newspapers The New York Times
pg. 69

Computer Program Patent

Applied Data Research, Inc., a computer service concern, said yesterday it had received a patent for a computer program. Industry sources said it was the first patent for a program—instructions (in computer language) that make the machine perform specific tasks. Martin A. Goetz developed the program.

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.